Occupational Focus' ergonomic assessments are designed to assess an individual's workstation. An Occupational Focus ergonomic assessment will help to ensure a workstation is appropriately set-up to:

- Minimise the risk of injury
- Reduce symptomology arising from incorrect workstation set-up
- Enhance productivity
- Boost health and wellbeing
- Improve performance

For employers, an Occupational Focus ergonomic assessment can be an effective means of promoting safety in your organization and mitigating risk.

Occupational Focus' ergonomic assessments have a strong educational component which aims to empower individuals to manage their health, not only through correct ergonomic set-up but more importantly through implementation and commitment to behavioural change.

Occupational Focus' ergonomic assessments can also be used to support the return to work of an injured worker, by ensuring the workstation is designed to minimise discomfort and avoid aggravation of the injury.

Occupational Focus offers a range of ergonomic assessment services including:

- Standard Assessments
This type of assessment is suitable for new employees, employees relocating desks or employees without symptoms.
- Comprehensive Assessments
This type of assessment is suitable for employees with an injury, disability, symptoms, discomfort or pain.
- Home-based Work Assessments
This type of assessment is preventative and proactive in nature, and will assist an employer to fulfil their workplace health and safety obligations for employees, where the home environment becomes the workplace.
- Ergonomic Vehicle Seating Assessments
This type of assessment assists employers to meet their workplace health and safety obligations. It involves assessment of the employee in relation to the seating and vehicle environment.
